

The International Center of Photography (ICP) is a museum, school, collecting institution, and center for photographers. ICP's mission is to present and interpret photography's vital role in contemporary culture.

INFINITY AWARDS

ICP inaugurated the Infinity Awards in 1984 to bring public attention to outstanding photographic achievements by honoring distinguished individuals and identifying future luminaries.

The Lifetime Achievement Award and Cornell Capa Award recipients are elected by ICP's Board of Trustees, President's Council, and staff; in 2010, the board also chose to present a Trustees Award. Other recipients are decided by a Selection Committee from the submissions of an International Nominating Committee, whose members change each year.

The revenues generated by this event assist the full range of the Center's programs, including exhibitions, publications, collections management activities, community outreach projects, and the ICP School.
